Martha Jane Ritchie

Printmaker and Mixed Medium Artist

Martha Jane Ritchie is an artist and printmaker who lives and works in Haines Junction, Yukon. Inspired by the natural beauty that surrounds her home-based studio, she creates bold linocut prints and mixed medium artworks. Her images of mountains, skies, trees, plants, and birds give viewers an intimate glimpse of life that thrives in the northern boreal forest and Yukon's vast landscape.

Martha works primarily in linoleum cut prints, a medium that is simple yet physical in the carving and hand printing processes. Her knowledge of the techniques and traditions of printmaking provide a basis from which she experiments and explores new methods of combining prints with pencil, paint, paper, and wood. This has also led to work with textiles and fabric printing.

Martha's work is available in galleries in the Yukon and Alaska.

Her art has been shown in solo and group exhibitions and is in private collections in Canada, England, Germany, and the United States.
